"DESCRIPTION" COLUMN NET ABBREVIATIONS:

NETS: Around the world, groups of public bulletin boards and other computer systems have loosely organized themselves into "networks" that share or "echo" messages among their members through periodic mail package distribution. Mail packages for most of these networks are relayed once per night, with long distance phone charges paid by each member system. Each network sponsors a collection of special-interest "conferences" or discussion forums. Each member BBS may select from this list, and any user may join the discussion. Most network member systems ask their users to install shareware "off-line" message-reading software. Software recommendations, local and network rules, and important suggestions may often be found in a Bulletins section available from the Main menu of participating systems.
